COVERS RICHEST GOLD AREA IN CALIFORNIA

Thinking Out Loud

By H. M. L.

Six counties are asking that the Tahoe Ukiah highway No. 20 be made an avenue of cross-state travel, a Sierra-to-the-Sea boulevard that will presently be known to all motordom as the Tahoe Pacific highway. For an association has been formed embracing chambers of commerce from Truckee and Lake Tahoe to Fort Bragg on the coast, which will presently make its prayer to the State Highway Commission, and, when six counties speak in unison, we believe the commissioners will listen attentatively.

As the Tahoe Ukiah highway is today, its western terminus is the Redwood Highway. About ten miles of new construction across a range of hills between the Redwood highway and a fine highway that follows roughly the Navarro river to the sea, is all that stands between a real Tahoe Pacific road, that will attract probably twice the traffic that now uses it. For, human nature being what it is, mountain folks always want to visit the sea, coast folks want to roll up into the Sierras, and Valley folks just naturally like to alternate between the two.

On Friday last the Tahoe Pacific Highway association put on a big program ending at the State Fair. From each end of the proposed Tahoe Pacific highway, that is Fort Bragg and Lake Tahoe, a motorcade started, lengthening as it proceeded, and the two caravans, meeting in Marysville then took the road to Sacramento, where all the participants, bedecked with badges, put on a bang-up program demonstrating a versatile talent, and a common interest in securing a road leading from 7,000 feet elevation to sea level and the sea.

There were Spanish dancers, and a baritone, there were the massed bands of Fort Bragg and Grass Valley high schools playing the Star Spangled Banner, there was a wood chopper whose shoulders were so broad that they drawfed the log he was cutting, there was a chorus of miners in overhauls and hard hats singing great rollicking songs, and of course that were parades, with Portuguese-American girls leading in bare legs and white riding boots and swinging silver batons like nobody's business.

It was a great show, a great day, a fine motorcade of people who want to get things done, who want to increase the travel on one of the finest routes in the U. S. A. The Nevada City and Grass Valley chambers of commerce, officers and many members, county officials, the forestry service, business men, and of course the Press of Nevada County, were all represented in the colorful pageant.

The Tahoe Pacific association has a long, hard row to hoe, but there are many men in the organization who are used to hard rows and hard hoeing, and we will be surprised, if in two years at the most, we, up here in the hills, will not be able to hop into our cars on a Saturday morning, and shortly after lunch on the beach at Albion, for instance, we'll be hurling our lines and sinkers far out into the Pacific surf, fishing for rock cod and whatnot, while our youngsters race up and down the beach in their shirt-tails. Two years, yes, two, should see the job done.

The motorcade arriving the State Fair first wanted to see what their own county was doing in the exhibit hall. In the Nevada county section two things were featured. Gold and apples. The apples, to the esthetic eye were dazzlingly beautiful. Green, gold, russet, and red, they surely established the reputation of the county's orchards. The gold probably won the most ohs and ahs, for the pans of nuggets, the slabs of pure gleaming metal freed of its quartz container, and the dully gleaming fragments of gold ore, were something to make the low-landers gasp. And, and first and last, while we no longer thrill at the sight of gold up here, where the gold comes from, we are proud that Nevada County is the premier gold producing county of California.

Mrs. Lageson Returns—

Mrs. L. G. Lageson, wife of the county agricultural commissioner, and son, Gordon, returned from Sacramento, where Lageson is assisting W. W. Esterly in the handling of Nevada County's booth at the state fair.

Death Calls Lee Leiter In Oakland

Former Local Merchant Dies Following Illness of Several Days

Many sorrowing friends and relatives attended the funeral rites Saturday in Berkeley for S. Lee Leiter 70, former Nevada City merchant, who died late Thursday in a San Francisco hospital.

Leiter, who at one time held a strong political influence in Nevada County, left here last spring to make his home in the bay area. Just recently he was a visitor in Nevada City and at that time friends were pleased at an apparent improvement in health. His final illness was of but several days duration.

Leiter first came to Nevada City in the 1890's, accepting employment as a clerk in the William Maher dry goods store. He married Miss Nellie Joyce in 1903, the couple later moving to San Jose where Leiter managed a large dry goods store.

Conducted Lace House

Leiter's love for Nevada City, however, called him back and he purchased Maher's store, which he operated for years under the name of the Lace House.

Leiter lived in retirement for many years after leaving the Lace House but several years ago again returned to the business field, opening a newsstand on Broad Street.

Illness last spring forced him to retire again and he moved to Berkeley to reside.

Leiter was for some years a member of the Nevada County Democratic Central Committee. He was a past exalted ruler of the Nevada City Lodge of Elks and a past district exalted ruler.

The deceased was a native of Hagerstown, Maryland. He leaves a brother, Joseph Leiter of Oakland, a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Kirkpatrick of Topeka, Kan., and many relatives in this area. Mrs. Leiter died many years ago.

BOARD URGES REFORESTATION OF STATE LANDS

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 9.—(UP)—The state forestry board today recommended the creation of a new bureau of reforestation within the division of forestry to direct "a comprehensive reforestation program for the state."

The appointment of an experienced forester to head the bureau was urged. According to board members he would plan reforestation programs, enlist the support and cooperation of private and public agencies interested in reforestation, and manage a chain of nurseries "capable of producing trees by the millions."

The board also asked endorsement by the California state council of defense and of a state wide fire control plan developed by the division of forestry. The board said the plan is needed for "coordination of the county's resources for preparedness and defense."

Board member R. V. Hartranft and Deputy Director of Natural Resources Warner L. Marsh submitted a report on reforestation declaring that forest covers must be re-established on hundreds of thousands of acres of nearly barren watershed.

Hantranft and Marsh said the program should be applied particularly to ten southern counties where, they reported, "the forest cover has been most depleted and where reforestation activities in connection with the development of water resources and for flood control is of the utmost importance."

ROAD PROJECT DESIRES ASKED BY LEGISLATORS

State Senator Jerrold L. Seawell, in a letter to The Nugget, said he would appreciate hearing from various organizations in his district that are interested in state highway problems regarding improvements they would desire to be made in the highway system of this district, which consists of the counties of Placer, Nevada and Sierra.

The letter states within the very near future, the California Highway Commission will be considering recommendations for road projects in the various counties of the state. These projects will consist of new construction, realigning present highways and various other minor road problems.

Suggests Project Submission

"If the highway commission," Seawell writes, "does not recommend such projects to the legislature, money will not be appropriated for the same, as that must be included in the state budget of 1941, governing roads and highways.

"It is my suggestion that the projects to be submitted be well studied and that accompanying data be furnished to the highway commission that would substantiate the inclusion of such projects in the highway system. If this is not done, and not presented to the highway commission on, or before, the budget is completed, it will be beyond the control of your legislative representatives to make the changes when the legislature convenes. In my opinion, time is the essence and all proposed projects should be immediately submitted to the highway commission."

Nearly 2,000 Men In County Subject To Training Duty

An estimated total of 1,922 men in Nevada County will be subject to registration for military service in the event the selective service law is passed by congress It is probable only a few will be called however.

The figure was made known by Brigadier General R. E. Mittelstaedt adjutant general of the California National Guard, in releasing to the county clerks tentative instructions for carrying out the registrations.

The plan calls for utilizing the regular election machinery of each county, the registration being done at the person's regular precinct polling place.

The estate on the number of those who will be required to register, General Mittelstaedt said, is based upon the assumption congress will set the conscription age limit from 21 to 31.

In Sierra County the estimate is 313 men and in Placer County 2,792.

PAUL VILES SEES AIR ARMADAS IN DEFENSE TESTS

Paul Viles, Buick distributor, who returned last week from a convention of Buick dealers in Los Angeles where the 1941 models were reviewed, announces that he already has on display these distinguished and serviceable motor cars at his show rooms in Hills Flat.

While in the south he visited the beaches and was astonished at the activity of both army and navy air fleets in defense preparation. Once he was stopped on the highway by army officers, and the interior of his car was examined. At that time and place every car was stopped and similarly given the once over.

While bathing on the beach with hundreds of other sightseers the air overhead would be filled with planes in practice formations, flights, and dog fights. At times one of these great aircraft would come down as though in a tail spin, with another following swiftly with spitting machine gun fire.

No motorist was permitted anywhere in the vicinity of aircraft factories which were going night and day at full capacity.

SCOTTS FLAT FIRE

The State Division of Forestry fire fighting crews were called to Scotts Flat Saturday to extinguish a brush fire. Scotts Flat dam workers were burning debris and the fire got out of control.

In the suit Anderson said he jumped from the highway down an abutting bank when he believed his life was in danger by the onrushing truck. The truck allegedly left the highway and precipitated the sheep upon Anderson, causing the plaintiff to suffer severe injuries.

Miners Won Valley Title Yesterday

Grass Valley Defeats Chico In Two Straight Contests

Scoring three runs in the 11th inning, the Garss Valley Miners yesterday defeated Chico to win the 1940 championship of the Sacramento Valley League.

In attempted continuation of their conquests the Miners will probably tangle with Modesto, State League title winners, and possibly Auburn, Placer-Nevada League champions, to determine the championship semi-pro team of Northern California.

Grass Valley's winning runs yesterday came when George Cooper singled in the eleventh frame, Vernon Madan walked and Dick Hoskins bunt went for a homerun. The bunt was fielded but overthrown to first and all three runners crossed the plate.

Up until the seventh inning Chico led by a score of 3 to 1, behind the superb pitching of Tommy Conlan.

Approximately 300 attended the game from Nevada County.

In all there was a crowd of about 1200 at the game.

The score:	R.	H.	E.
Grass Valley	6	14	2

Roosevelt's Evasion Scored

Candidate Roosevelt's evasion of Wendell Willkie's challenge to public debate, on the ground that he is too much preoccupied with the Battle of Britain, is scored by the Baltimore Sun, a Democratic newspaper, in an editorial, which says in part:

Mr. Willkie does well in renewing his challenge to Mr. Roosevelt to engage in face-to-face debates on the state of the Natinn and in suggesting ways in which Mr. Roosevelt could find the time for such debates. By hammering home the challenge, and continuing to hammer it, an end will be made to the pretense that Mr. Roosevelt is so occupied with the war in Europe that he cannot and should not, in this Presidential election, give attention to debates on the domestic affairs of the United States.

To say that he will be within his rights in refusing the challenge to engage in face-to-face debates with Mr. Willkie is not to say that he will be within his rights in refusing to engage in long-distance debates or the usual forms of public discussion of internal affairs. And that, quite clearly, is what the President and his advisers are attempting to claim as the campaign starts.

Secretary Ickes tried to talk down the nose to Mr. Willkie by explaining that the President "cannot adjourn the Battle of Britain." And the Associated Press reports from Hyde Park that, when asked about debates with Mr. Willkie, the President smiled, flicked ashes from his cigarette and recalled that in his acceptance speech he had said he was President of 130,000,000 people and things were in such shape that it was obvious that this year he could not do any campaigning.

Of course, this is a transparent effort to use the war situation as a shield against debate on domestic issues. The war situation does take part of the President's time and attention. But it does not take too much of his time to prevent his conferring with Mr. Wallace, Chairman Flynn and other stalwarts in the campaign for a third term. And the war does not take too much of his time to prevent his spending days on tours of inspection which may be pleasant, but are wholly superficial.

It is not the Battle of Britain which prevents the President's engaging in face-to-face debates with Mr. Willkie on domestic affairs, nor is it the preparedness program. It is not the Battle of Britain which causes Mr. Roosevelt to smile and flick the ashes from his cigarette and tell the reporters that things are in such shape this year that, as President of 130,000,000 people, he obviously cannot do any campaigning. The truth is that Mr. Roosevelt wishes to evade the following facts:

The fact that under the New Deal new enterprise has been stagnant for the longest period in our history.

The fact that under the New Deal the pool of permanent unemployment is the largest in our history.

The fact that under the New Deal federal taxes have been tripled and still fall far short of expenditures.

The fact that under the New Deal the national debt has been more than doubled and is now runaway.

The fact that under the New Deal promises in 1932 and 1936 to control spending and debt have been worthless.

The fact that under the New Deal spending and debts are not so much as mentioned in public.

Also, of course, if the Battle of Britain can be made into a shield, there will be no need for Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Ickes and the others of the inner circle to stand up publicly in support of their argument that this particular President is The Indispensable Man, although the nation made shift to dispense with the services of Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Cleveland and other giants. The game is plain for all to see.

JUST WONDERIN'

I wonder at the voters now—
The wisdom they display,
The thought they evidently bring
To problems of the day.
It's hard to fool the voters here,
Where human minds are free;
They study each pernicious plan
That threatens liberty.

I wonder if the results obtained by the last election, were not pleasing to most of us. Of course, there were a few disappointments, but in the main, it seems that we, the voters, did a great deal of clear thinking and voted our convictions with more than a modicum of intelligence—and with very little attention to dictation.

Now we may put our thinking caps right back on and get ready for the great time coming in November.

Happily we won't have to think about ham and eggs, single tax and Mr. Patterson; but there is that third term proposition to be considered. Can we approach it without too much excitement? After all, the desire to return to the White House for the third time does not constitute unpardonable sin. Perhaps running for third terms runs in the Roosevelt family. Didn't our Teddy once leap upon an unorthodox beast—a bull moose if memory serves me well, and go dashing away on a third term crusade to the consternation of the elephant and the dismay of the donkey?

Then too, our president may be superstitious—he may have heard the old phrase, "what happens twice may happen thrice." and feel that a return engagement is inevitable.

Mr. Willkie appears to be a most agreeable person of undoubted ability, a pleasing personality and a hatred for class distinctions and religious intolerances which is truly commendable. We shall become better acquainted with him as the weeks go by.

What if he was a democrat for many years, doesn't that prove that republicans and democrats, like the governor's lady and Judy O'Grady, are relatives under the skin?

The thing to remember as we try to rationalize our thinking is that recrimination and name calling are not argument. From now on until the final vote is cast we'll think—I hope, until the controversy is settled and settled in a manner calculated to advance the safety and glory of our native land, America.

Hitler raised a hue and cry when it seemed likely he would be ringed about by a wall of steel; but he has since worked unceasingly to build about himself a wall of hatred so dark and dank and terrible that its shadow blights the world. It is a wall stained by human blood. It echoes the cries of little children, the moans of unhappy women, the curses of enslaved men. Sometime it will fall upon its builder and crush him into nothingness under its flaming fragments.

Uncle Silas says: "Some one has promised to furnish Governor Olson with crying towels. Now let's take up a collection and build him a wailing place."

—A. MERRIAM CONNER.

'What Was The Train Whistling For Last Night?'

Perhaps you wondered at the frequent whistling of the Narrow Gauge engine at odd times during the day and night during the last few weeks. Those whistle blasts signalized the departure to Colfax of box cars loaded with smooth-skinned Bartlett pears. At Colfax they were transferred to refrigerated S. P. cars for their speedy journey to eastern markets.

Those blasts definitely signalized, too, the important role the Nevada County Narrow Gauge rail equipment fills in supplying a transportation demand in this county. Schedules to fit the operations are maintained—time tabled schedules are entirely handled by the Narrow Gauge's motorized passenger bus and trucking units—yet there is always daily demand for rail freighting service.

Heavy shipments, aside from the continual stream of fruit cars, handled expediently by the railroad's box and flat cars included:

Continuous cars of steel windows, doors, glass bricks, etc., for the Memorial Hospital.

Heavy machinery and equipment used in the mining industry.

Gravel cars loaded to capacity with fine gravel for use of the State Highway Maintenance Department in surfacing highways in this section.

A steady stream of tankers with capacity loads of gasoline and fuel oils.

Innumerable carloads of industrial timbers, building lumbers, cement, brick, pipe, plaster, drill steel, etc.
